PRECIOUS METALS COMMENTARY

Gold prices are just slightly higher in early-afternoon U.S. trading Tuesday, while silver prices are posting decent gains and hit a three-week high. Gold and many other markets are in a holding pattern ahead of the Federal Reserve's Open Market Committee (FOMC) meeting decision Wednesday afternoon. A slightly lower U.S. dollar index today prompted some buying interest in the metals. December gold futures were last up $0.80 an ounce at $1,205.30. December Comex silver was last up $0.154 at $14.49 an ounce.

The two-day FOMC meeting that began Tuesday morning is expected to see the Fed slightly raise U.S. interest rates. Fed Chairman Jerome Powell will also hold a press conference after the meeting. As usual, the marketplace will parse the Fed's wording for clues on the pace of future Fed rate hikes and the Fed's inflation expectations.

World stock markets were mixed today. There are lingering worries the U.S. and China's trade war will escalate to the point of damaging world commerce. Meanwhile, President Trump is negotiating bi-lateral trade deals with other Asian countries and has signed an agreement with South Korea.

President Trump gave a very nationalistic speech to the United Nations today, including criticizing Iran and China, but the markets did not react much to the speech.

The other key outside market today finds November Nymex crude oil prices slightly higher and trading just above $72.00 a barrel. Supply worries have boosted oil recently. U.S. sanctions against Iran begin in early November, which will likely take much of that country's oil off the world market
