PRECIOUS METALS COMMENTARY

Gold prices are moderately up and trading at their session highs in early-afternoon U.S. trading, and just before the futures markets closes. Some perceived bargain hunting, a weaker U.S. stock market today, and some chart-based buying are all working to lift the yellow metal.

After some healthy consolidation, gold could be ready to move higher next week as all the attention shifts to avoiding another U.S. government shutdown (deadline 15 February) and U.S. macro data including the Fed response.

If there is no deal and another shutdown is triggered, gold could see a sharp rally, said RJO Futures senior market strategist Phillip Streible. “When the U.S. government shut down the last time, gold futures shot up on December 24th and made new highs. I would expect another sharp rally on news of U.S. government shutdown,” Streible noted. Source: Kitco
