PRECIOUS METALS COMMENTARY

The U.S. economic news of the day Tuesday was Powell's morning testimony on the U.S. economy to the Senate Banking Committee. Most market watchers reckoned Powell would sound a dovish tone on monetary policy and that's what he delivered. He reiterated the Fed will remain "patient" on any U.S. monetary policy adjustments, and said the U.S. economy remains healthy, albeit with a few concerns on the global front. Powell did not deliver any surprises to the marketplace. He speaks to the House of Representatives on Wednesday.

Asian and European stock markets were mostly weaker overnight, on corrective pullbacks from recent gains. U.S. stock indexes are also pointed toward slightly lower openings when the New York day session begins. The U.S. indexes hit three-month highs on Monday and were trading near steady at midday today, amid generally upbeat trader and investor attitudes and with no major geopolitical fires presently burning.
