Overseas Markets Commentary

Major European equities markets bounced early overnight, US indices also opening higher and mostly maintaining gains on supportive announcements out of the US and an OPEC meeting in Algiers.

US Federal Reserve chair Janet Yellen confirmed to a parliamentary financial services committee that the central bank had determined no fixed time line for interest rate moves.

In addition, OPEC members said they had agreed overall lower crude production was needed, and that specifics would be negotiated and likely ultimately determined at the groups scheduled 30 November meeting.

In addition, a US weekly petroleum inventories report revealed crude stocks had decreased for a fourth consecutive week.

Further, US August durable goods orders had been expected to drop 1.9% but were reported effectively steady overall.

IMF MD Christine Lagarde bemoaned restrictive trade practices for constraining global economic growth.

Commodities Commentary

Oil – traded as much as 6% higher, after OPEC members confirmed consensus on lowering crude output.

Further the EIA (US agency) confirmed a fourth consecutive week crude stockpile reductions, this time by 1.9MMbbl.

Brent crude settled 5.9% higher for the session, at $US48.69/bbl.

Gold – positive US durable goods and crude stocks data helped detract from gold trade, as did testimony from US Federal Reserve chair Janet Yellen, which included a concession that some accommodative support would come to an end. The OPEC announcement also favoured equities sentiment.

Base metals – lower LME copper stocks fell unexpectedly. The oil rally also supported overnight gains.

Some caution is anticipated tonight. Apart from quarter's-end trade tomorrow, China's official PMI figures are expected Saturday, when a week of National Day holidays commences across the nation. Caixin is scheduled to release a preliminary September China PMI tomorrow.
